Additional thoughts:

If you are concerned about testing facility safety or just don't feel prepared to take one of these tests this fall for about one million understandable reasons, pivot your plan and review test optional colleges and universities. Taking a test should not compromise your health or your overall wellness, and there are over 1,000 options out there, including SIUC and JALC, which do not require a test score for admission: scores or other academic information may still be required for scholarship eligibility.

You can go to college without a test score on file, but it may not be the college you are thinking of right now.

If, on the other hand, you feel comfortable with testing procedures through the fall, GO FOR IT. This is a decision for you and your family to decide on related to your unique plan. Testing is available at this time, and if you are able and comfortable doing so, get a score on file, adjust your application list and plan accordingly.

Seats are filling rapidly, so remember to expand your radius of testing centers that might allow for more open seat options. You do not have to take the test(s) in Carbondale for the test score to count!

Create the plan that suits you and accommodates your goals.
